Working Women in Transition

PUTTING THE SKILLS AND TALENTS OF MATURE WOMEN TO WORK

For many mature women, retirement is not an option, but changing direction after years of personal investment in a job can be scary. Losing long-term employees can also cost a company valuable expertise and continuity. To address these concerns, Working Women in Transition gives older women the forum to discover resources and options that can transform their lives as they prepare for their next career and it offers employers an opportunity to explore trends and strategies that tap into the enormous potential of experienced working women.

“ The opportunity exists for Indiana to thrive by maximizing the economic contributions of its older population and, by doing so, to become a leader among Midwestern states. ”

Working Women in Transition will assist:

- Mature women to explore ways to empower themselves and create positive change in their lives, and
- HR professionals to identify major emerging trends as well as the value and capabilities of mature working women.

OUR SPEAKERS

Ellen Miller, PhD, PT is the Executive Director of the Center for Aging & Community and holds the DeHaan Endowed Chair in Gerontology at the University of Indianapolis. Miller has been with the Center since its inception in 2001, taking on her current role in 2005. As Executive Director, Miller works to advance the Center's role as educator, consultant, convener and collaborator on issues important to older adults. The Center focuses on establishing effective partnerships between the community and academia, using the expertise of the University to assist with and drive initiatives and research that will solve real world problems and improve the quality of life for older adults. Miller has also led the Center to a prominent role in gerontology education and training, and has established partnerships with local, state and national aging network organizations. She recently spearheaded the efforts of more than one dozen Indiana aging services organizations to establish the Indiana Collaborative Conference on Aging in 2007.

Nancy Ahlrichs is an international speaker, author and columnist. She has spoken to more than 450 audiences and management teams in utilities, insurance, healthcare, high tech, legal, banking, government and other fields in the past five years using her 25 years of experience in human resources, marketing, and management. Nancy has written several books. They are: Manager of Choice, Competing for Talent: Key Recruitment and Retention Strategies for Becoming an Employer of Choice and Igniting Gen B and Gen V: The New Rules of Engagement for Boomers, Veterans, and Other Long-Termers on the Job. She is also a contributing author for On Staffing, an edited volume by Wiley & Sons. Nancy is active in a variety of community and professional organizations, and was Kiwanian of the Year in 2001 and also named a “Distinguished Hoosier” for her service to the State of Indiana by the late Governor Frank O'Bannon.

Linda Rendleman, M.S., speaker, facilitator and author, is dedicated to the development of women. As a single mother, cancer survivor and business owner, she brings perspective to the many roles and challenges of today's woman. Founder and CEO of Business Women Connect, Inc., an organization with the mission of developing business and professional women through mentoring, connections and resources, Linda has a background that spans thirty years of real-life experiences speaking, writing and promoting growth for women at home and in the workplace. Her soon-to-be published book, Women Like Us: Real Stories and Strategies for Living Your Best Life, shares women’s stories and strategies for a successful life. She has received recognition and numerous awards for her extraordinary speaking and writing abilities. Most recently, she was honored by the Indiana Commission for Women as a 2008 Torchbearer Recipient for leading and inspiring women to greater balance and fulfillment for quality lives.
